

Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties and Letters Rogatory

Obtaining Evidence and Assistance from Foreign Jurisdictions

T. Markus Funk, PhD

Second edition
2024

This Federal Judicial Center publication was undertaken in furtherance of the Center's statutory mission to develop educational materials for the judicial branch. While the Center regards the content as responsible and valuable, this publication does not reflect policy or recommendations of the Board of the Federal Judicial Center.

This publication was produced and published at U.S. taxpayer expense.

Contents

I.	Introduction,	1
II.	Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties,	5
	A. Overview,	5
	1. Scope,	5
	2. Procedure,	6
	3. Contents,	7
	B. Statutory Scheme,	8
	1. 28 U.S.C. § 1782,	8
	2. 18 U.S.C. § 3512,	9
	C. Judicial Review of Requests for Mutual Legal Assistance,	10
	D. Legal Issues,	10
	1. Dual Criminality,	11
	2. Defense Access to Evidence Located Abroad,	11
	3. Delay,	14
	4. Statute of Limitations,	14
	5. Impact of the 2018 CLOUD Act,	16
III.	Letters Rogatory,	17
	A. Outgoing,	17
	B. Incoming,	18
	C. Case Management,	19
	1. Preliminary Information,	20
	2. Essential Elements of a Letter Rogatory,	20
IV.	Information Exchange Through Informal Channels,	23
V.	Conclusion,	23
	Appendix,	24
	Recommended Resources,	26
	Table of Authorities,	27
	About the Author,	36

I. Introduction

Whether investigating transnational criminal conduct or engaging in the civil discovery process in a transnational proceeding, those involved will almost always be required to collect evidence in foreign countries. National sovereignty, international treaties, and international law, however, preclude U.S. law enforcement officials from simply flying to a foreign country to conduct searches, question suspects, obtain documents, or proceed with arresting individuals for trial in the United States. In the absence of a foreign country's agreement to cooperate in a criminal investigation or civil litigation, U.S. prosecutors or civil litigation counsel, in short, have limited options. For this reason, transnational cooperation and collaboration are integral, and increasingly important and mainstream, components of contemporary justice systems.¹

Stepping back a bit, there are two primary means of obtaining evidence for criminal proceedings: a mutual legal assistance treaty (MLAT) and a letter rogatory. For civil proceedings, in contrast, there is only a letter rogatory. Evidence obtained from abroad through these tools may be presented as part of court proceedings, requiring U.S. judges to be familiar with the legal issues implicated by transnational requests for assistance.² In addition, judges should be aware that diplomacy, executive agreements, and information exchange through informal communications also play an important role in transnational criminal investigations and civil litigation.

Requests for transnational assistance requiring judicial oversight most commonly involve activities necessary for proceeding with a criminal investigation or prosecution or a transnational civil proceeding, such as serving subpoenas, locating evidence and individuals, and taking testimony. The court's role in reviewing these requests will vary depending upon the applicable treaties and foreign law.³

1. See generally Cássius Guimarães Chai et al., Global Governance and Democracy: Discussing Mutual Legal Correspondence, Human Rights, and Legal Cooperation on Criminal Justice, 14 Beijing L. Rev. 1504, 1507 (2023) (“The Doha Declaration . . . emphasizes the need for international cooperation in criminal matters such as extradition, mutual legal assistance, and the transfer of sentenced persons. This cooperation is necessary to combat transnational organized crime, terrorism, and corruption effectively.”); Zhaobin Pei & Yuntong Wu, Prospects for the Operation of China South Korea International Police Cooperation Mechanism against Crime, 2 Found. L. & Int'l Aff. Rev. 187, 191 (2021) (“While the legal system and interest demands of another country are different, so also, the degree of cooperation and initiative varies greatly.”); Lita M. Grace, The United States and Canadian Border: An Attempt to Increase Bi-Lateral Cooperation for the Prevention of Transnational Crime, Colum. J. Int'l Aff., July 23, 2012, <https://blogs.cuit.columbia.edu/jia/online-articles/united-states-and-canadian-border> (“[M]ultiple federal law enforcement agencies have begun to observe a statistical increase in the committing of transnational crime. The United States understands that it will take cooperation with more than one country in order to deter transnational crime. . . .”). See also Raquel de Mattos Pimenta & Otavio Venturini, International Cooperation and Negotiated Settlements for Transnational Bribery: A Study of the Odebrecht Case, 17 DIREITO GV L. Rev. 1 (2021); Jenia Iontcheva Turner, Transnational Networks and International Criminal Justice, 105 Mich. L. Rev. 985 (2007).

2. This guide focuses on obtaining evidence and assistance in criminal matters. The Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters [hereinafter Hague Evidence Convention], codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1781 under the auspices of the Hague Conference on Private International Law and enforced since 1972, sets forth the procedures for obtaining evidence and assistance in civil cases by its ninety signatory countries (including the United States) and one regional economic integration organization (up from the fourteen original members back in 1954). See generally HCCH Members, <https://www.hcch.net/en/states/hcch-members> (last visited Feb. 23, 2024). The 2015 Doha Declaration, moreover, is designed to “further strengthen collective efforts on crime prevention and criminal justice, promote the rule of law and contribute to sustainable development.” See Doha Declaration on Integrating Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, https://www.unodc.org/documents/congress/Declaration/V1504151_English.pdf (2015).

3. For example, 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) expressly states that “[a] person may not be compelled to give his testimony or statement or to produce a document or other thing in violation of any legally applicable privilege,” which may include

The MLAT is a treaty-based mechanism for seeking foreign law enforcement cooperation and assistance in support of an ongoing criminal investigation or proceeding.⁴ The MLAT process and its benefits are available only to government officials, typically prosecutors.⁵ MLATs do not apply to civil litigants or proceedings. Supervising the execution of incoming MLATs—requests for assistance from foreign jurisdictions—requires direct federal district court oversight and involvement.⁶ In contrast, the courts play no part in initiating or processing outgoing MLAT requests. That is the province of the executive branch.

Letters rogatory, in contrast, have a considerably broader reach than MLATs: they can be issued by U.S. federal and state courts as part of criminal, civil, and administrative proceedings, and they can be sent to U.S. federal and state courts by any foreign or international tribunal or “interested person.”⁷

Letters rogatory (also known as “letters of request” when presented by a nonparty “interested person”⁸) were first used to facilitate cooperation among the courts of the several states of the Union. Today, the letter rogatory process is used internationally and codified at 28 U.S.C. §§ 1781⁹ and 1782 (the “Judicial Assistance Statute”).¹⁰ foreign privilege (see In re Commissioner’s Subpoenas, 325 F.3d 1287, 1292 (11th Cir. 2003)). See also Rebecca Wexler, Life, Liberty, and Data Privacy: The Global CLOUD, the Criminally Accused, and Executive Versus Judicial Compulsory Process Powers, 101 Tex. L. Rev. 1341, 1356 (2023) (noting that “applications for letters rogatory require ex parte judicial review from courts in both the receiving and requesting nations before anyone can be served with process . . .”).

4. See U.S. Dep’t of State, 7 Foreign Affairs Manual § 962.1, <https://fam.state.gov/FAM/07FAM/07FAM0960.html> (“MLATs have become increasingly important. They seek to improve the effectiveness of judicial assistance and to regularize and facilitate its procedures.”) (updated Nov. 10, 2022).

5. See id. § 962.5. See also Federal Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136, 149 (2d Cir. 2022) (“An MLAT is an agreement between two sovereigns to provide assistance in criminal matters where evidence, persons, or property potentially useful to one sovereign’s prosecutors may be found within the other’s jurisdiction.”). See also Brian Richardson, The Imperial Prosecutor?, 59 Am. Crim. L. Rev. 39, 71 (2022) (“The MLAT regime today remains the province of the prosecutorial arm of the Executive branch.”).

6. However, state courts do not help in the processing of incoming MLAT requests. If evidence located abroad is needed as part of a prosecution in state courts, local prosecutors may enlist the MLAT process and work with the foreign judicial system. See Morgenthau v. Avion Res. Ltd., 849 N.Y.S.2d 223, 230 (App. Div. 2007). See also Hon. Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, The Role of Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties in Obtaining Foreign Evidence, Litig. Mag. 1 (2014), <https://www.perkinscoie.com/images/content/3/1/v2/31795/2014-winter-litigation.pdf>.

7. See 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (“The order may be made pursuant to a letter rogatory issued, or request made, by a foreign or international tribunal or upon the application of any interested person and may direct that the testimony or statement be given, or the document or other thing be produced, before a person appointed by the court.”). See also ZF Auto. US, Inc. v. Luxshare, Ltd., 596 U.S. 619, 633 (2022) (holding that “§ 1782 requires a ‘foreign or international tribunal’ to be governmental or intergovernmental. . . . Private adjudicatory bodies [such as international arbitration tribunals] do not fall within § 1782.”).

8. See generally In re Letter of Request from Crown Prosecution Serv. of U.K., 870 F.2d 686, 687 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (involving a request by foreign government for information for use in underlying criminal investigation). See also Letter of Request, Black’s Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019) (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 28); Yellow Pages Photos, Inc. v. Ziplocal, LP, 795 F.3d 1255, 1273 (11th Cir. 2015) (Letters of request “are the means by which a court in one country requests a court of another country to assist in the production of evidence located in the foreign country.”).

9. 28 U.S.C. § 1781(a) provides that the U.S. State Department is “empowered” to (1) use formal channels to transmit letters rogatory from foreign or international tribunals to the appropriate U.S. court and receive and return them after execution and (2) transmit letters rogatory from U.S. courts to the applicable foreign or international tribunal, officer, or agency and receive and return them after execution. Notably, § 1781(b) also expressly states that U.S. courts or foreign or international tribunals may skip the middleman (to wit, the U.S. State Department) and send their requests directly to the foreign tribunal, officer, or agency.

10. 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) allows any litigant involved in a “proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal” to apply to a U.S. court to obtain evidence for use in the non-U.S. civil or criminal proceeding. This avenue for obtaining evidence from inside the United States is, thus, unrestricted in terms of (1) the type of proceeding, and (2) the foreign countries from which such requests can issue, and, therefore, overlaps—and, indeed, exceeds—the subject matter of the Hague Evidence

Letters rogatory are available to prosecutors, defendants, and civil litigants once formal proceedings have commenced; they typically cannot issue during the investigative stage of criminal proceedings.¹¹ The process for letters rogatory is, to the routine frustration of litigants, significantly more time-consuming and unpredictable than that for MLATs. This is largely because the enforcement of letters rogatory is a matter of comity between courts rather than treaty based.

For these reasons, prosecutors typically consider letters rogatory an option of last resort for accessing evidence abroad, to be exercised only when MLATs are unavailable. In contrast, because MLATs are never available to private parties, defense counsel and civil litigants must rely on letters rogatory to gather evidence located abroad. This disparity in access to evidence may result in delayed proceedings and cause the defense to raise access-to-justice issues.

Requests from abroad (“incoming requests”) for legal assistance are directed to a country’s designated “central authority,” usually the Department (or Ministry) of Justice. The central authority, in turn, transmits the MLAT or letter rogatory-related communication to the appropriate court or government entity. When a federal prosecutor appears before a U.S. district court requesting assistance on behalf of a foreign state or provides notice that the U.S. government will seek assistance from a foreign state, the prosecutor acts at the direction of the U.S. Department of Justice’s Office of International Affairs (OIA). OIA is the United States’ central authority and de facto functional hub for all outgoing and incoming requests for transnational investigation and litigation assistance. Its attorneys process the paperwork for incoming and outgoing requests for assistance, issue guidance, and draft the form motions used by federal prosecutors. If the court has questions or concerns about the request, the judge may address them directly to OIA, typically through the local U.S. Attorney’s Office.

This guide provides an overview of the statutory schemes and procedural matters that distinguish MLATs and letters rogatory. It also discusses legal issues that arise when the prosecution, the defense, or a civil litigant seeks to obtain evidence from abroad as part of a criminal or civil proceeding. Figure 1 is a chart that compares the two processes. The guide also discusses informal channels for information exchange in Part IV.

Convention. What is more, unlike the Hague Evidence Convention, § 1782 does not require the foreign litigant to first request the discovery from the non-U.S. tribunal.

11. See Crown Prosecution Serv. of U.K., 870 F.2d at 692 (suggesting that letters rogatory are available unless there is a reliable indication that there is a likelihood that proceedings will be instituted within a reasonable time). See also 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (providing that, with the exception of criminal investigations, the section only covers “testimony or statement or . . . document or other thing for use in a proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal”).

Figure 1. Comparison of an MLAT and a Letter Rogatory

Issue	MLAT	Letter Rogatory
Nature of instrument?	Bilateral cooperation treaty	Issued by state and federal courts as a matter of comity (and with the expectation of reciprocity)
Scope of use?	The primary method of obtaining foreign evidence and other assistance	Available to all parties in criminal and civil matters
Nature of judicial involvement?	U.S. district courts supervise issuance and execution only of incoming requests	Federal and state judiciaries supervise issuance and execution of outgoing and incoming requests
Available to criminal defendants?	No (except pursuant to MLATs with Switzerland, Turkey, and the Netherlands)	Yes; in fact, it is the primary formal means for defendants to obtain foreign evidence
Available to civil litigants?	No	Yes
Available to prosecutors?	Yes	Yes
Must a case have been filed for assistance to be available?	No	Yes
Available pre-indictment (during investigative phase)?	Yes	No
Efficient method of obtaining evidence?	Yes, relatively speaking	No, generally slow and cumbersome
Processed through diplomatic channels?	Always	Almost always

II. Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties

A. Overview

MLATs are the principal vehicle through which law enforcement officials make transnational requests for assistance relating to evidence gathering and other law enforcement activities. They are available for use by law enforcement officials involved in criminal investigations and proceedings (or in some civil matters where the case is related to a criminal matter).¹² MLATs are legally binding negotiated commitments. Nonetheless, courts review specific requests for assistance and may deny them if they fail to comply with applicable domestic law or procedure.¹³

1. Scope

MLATs provide for mutual cooperation between nations in the investigation and prosecution of transnational crime, and they do so through explicitly enumerated categories of law enforcement assistance unique to each treaty.¹⁴ The types of assistance MLATs usually provide for include the following:

- serving judicial or other documents;
- locating or identifying persons or things;
- taking testimony;
- examining objects and sites;
- requesting searches and seizures;
- obtaining documents or electronic evidence;
- identifying, tracing, and freezing or confiscating proceeds or instrumentalities of crime and/or other assets;

12. See generally 7 Foreign Affairs Manual § 962.5, supra note 4. See also Fed. Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136, 149 (2d Cir. 2022) (“An MLAT is an agreement between two sovereigns to provide assistance in criminal matters where evidence, persons, or property potentially useful to one sovereign’s prosecutors may be found within the other’s jurisdiction. Nigeria is one of many countries that have an MLAT with the United States.”).

13. See generally United States v. Rommy, 506 F.3d 108, 129 (2d Cir. 2007) (holding that “when securing evidence without MLAT authorization, foreign government officials lacking diplomatic immunity must conduct themselves in accordance with applicable ‘domestic laws’”); Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Ir.-U.S., art. 14, ¶ 1, Jan. 18, 2001, T.I.A.S. No. 13137 (requiring that any request for the “search, seizure, and delivery of any item to the Requesting Party . . . is carried out in accordance with the laws of that Party.”), <https://www.state.gov/wp-content/uploads/2019/03/13137-Ireland-MLAT-01.18.2001.pdf>; Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Ger.-U.S., Oct. 14, 2003, art. 1, ¶ 2, T.I.A.S. No. 09-1018 (providing that assistance “shall include . . . any other form of assistance not prohibited by the laws of the Requested State”), <https://www.state.gov/wp-content/uploads/2019/02/09-1018-Germany-MLAT.pdf>. See also Kimberly Prost, Breaking Down the Barriers: International Cooperation in Combating Transnational Crime (1998), copy on file with author (“For mutual assistance to succeed, the operative principle must be that requests will be executed in accordance with the law of the requested state and to the extent not prohibited by that law, will be provided in the manner sought by the requesting state. In other words, while authorities in a requested state must always meet the standards prescribed by domestic law, unless the rendering of assistance in the form sought would constitute a violation of that law, it should be provided.”).

14. See In re Commissioner’s Subpoenas, 325 F.3d 1287, 1290 (11th Cir. 2003):

Despite the apparent versatility of 28 U.S.C. § 1782, law enforcement authorities found the statute to be an unattractive option in practice because it provided wide discretion in the district court to refuse the request and did not obligate other nations to return the favor that it grants. MLATs, on the other hand, have the desired quality of compulsion, as they contractually obligate the two countries to provide to each other evidence and other forms of assistance needed in criminal cases while streamlining and enhancing the effectiveness of the process for obtaining needed evidence.

- transferring persons in custody for testimonial purposes or to face charges, as in extradition cases;
- freezing assets; and
- assisting with any other practice or procedure permitted by the foreign law and specified in the applicable treaty.¹⁵

Most MLATs also include a catchall provision authorizing the transfer of any evidence not prohibited by the requested nation’s law.¹⁶

The United States has bilateral MLATs in force with every European Union member state, many of the Organization of American States member states, and many other countries around the world. The U.S. Department of Justice negotiates an MLAT in cooperation with the U.S. Department of State. The Secretary of State formally submits the proposed MLAT, typically together with a report detailing the function and purposes of the MLAT’s key provisions,¹⁷ to the President of the United States for transmittal to the U.S. Senate. Following the advice and consent of the Senate, the President signs the treaty and directs the Secretary of State to take the actions necessary for the treaty to enter into force. Once signatory countries have complied with entry-into-force provisions, the MLAT becomes binding under international law.¹⁸

In February 2010, the United States and the European Union (through its fifty-six member countries) entered into a historic MLAT. This multiparty MLAT seeks to enhance and modernize cross-border law enforcement and judicial cooperation. The terms of the E.U.-U.S. agreement include standard areas of assistance, such as identifying financial account information, finding and seizing evidence, and taking testimony. This MLAT also includes provisions addressing bank secrecy, joint criminal investigations, use of videoconferencing for taking testimony, and assistance to administrative agencies, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Trade Commission.¹⁹

2. Procedure

When a foreign country requests assistance pursuant to an MLAT, the U.S. court must determine whether (1) the terms of the MLAT prescribe practices or procedures for the taking of testimony and production of evidence, (2) the Federal Rules of Evidence apply, or (3) the MLAT requires some sort of a hybrid approach. It is also acceptable to follow specified practices and procedures of the requesting country—provided they are consistent with U.S. law, including the rules relating to privilege. MLATs executed in the United States must follow U.S. constitutional requirements, including the protection of 15. See, e.g., Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Braz. -U.S., Feb. 21, 2001, T.I.A.S. No. 12889, <https://www.state.gov/wp-content/uploads/2019/02/12889-Brazil-Law-Enforcement-MLAT-10.14.1997.pdf>; Ir. Treaty, supra note 13; Ger. Treaty, supra note 13. See also Hon. Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, The Role of Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties in Obtaining Foreign Evidence, 40 A.B.A. Litig. J. 1, 1–3 (2014) (listing standard types of assistance).

16. David Luban et al., International and Transnational Criminal Law 376 (2009). See, e.g., Ir. Treaty, supra note 13; Ger. Treaty, supra note 13.

17. See, e.g., S. Exec. Doc. No. 109-14 (2006); S. Treaty Doc. No. 111-6 (2010). See also Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty with Bermuda, Senate Exec. Rep. No. 112-3 (Aug. 30, 2011), <https://www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/CRPT-112erpt3/html/CRPT-112erpt3.htm>.

18. See, e.g., S. Exec. Doc. No. 110-14 (2008). See also U.S. Gov’t Accountability Off., Tax Administration: IRS’s Information Exchanges with Other Countries Could Be Improved through Better Performance Information, GAO-11-730, (2011), <https://www.gao.gov/assets/gao-11-730.pdf>.

19. See Agreement on Mutual Legal Assistance, E.U.-U.S., June 25, 2003, T.I.A.S. No. 10-201.1, <https://www.state.gov/wp-content/uploads/2019/02/10-201.1-European-Union-Mutual-Legal-Assistance-Treaty.pdf>. See also Luban et al., supra note 16, at 386.

Fourth Amendment²⁰ and Fifth Amendment²¹ rights. That said, U.S. legal standards do not apply to the seizure of evidence overseas when the foreign country is conducting the investigation independently and seizes evidence later introduced in a U.S. court,²² nor does the Sixth Amendment right to counsel attach to civil depositions.²³

3. Contents

To assist the U.S. court in reviewing an incoming MLAT request, the following information is usually included (or should be made available by the assistant U.S. attorney handling the matter):

Basic information

- the name of the authority conducting the investigation, prosecution, or other proceeding to which the request relates;
- a description of the subject matter and the nature of the investigation, prosecution, or proceeding, including the specific criminal offenses that relate to the matter;
- a description of the evidence, information, or other assistance sought; and
- a statement of the purpose for which the evidence, information, or other assistance is sought.

Assistance-specific details

- information concerning the identity and location of any person from whom evidence is sought;

20. U.S. Const. amend. IV (providing freedom from “unreasonable searches and seizures”). See, e.g., Ger. Treaty, supra note 13. See also Krista Peace, Where in the World Is My Data Today? The U.S. – U.K. Bilateral Data Access Agreement Ushers in a New Era of Cross-Border Data Sharing for Criminal Investigations, 47 N.C. J. Int’l L. 417, 422 (2022); Will Havemann, Privilege and the Belfast Project, 65 Stan. L. Rev. Online 79, 84 (2012); Michael J. Bulzomi, Investigating International Terrorism Overseas: Constitutional Considerations, 71 FBI L. Enforcement Bull. 25, 26 (July 2002).

21. U.S. Const. amend. V. Witnesses deposed in the United States or in a foreign country retain the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, regardless of whether they are U.S. citizens or foreign nationals. See generally In re Terrorist Bombings of U.S. Embassies in E. Africa, 552 F.3d 177, 199 (2d Cir. 2008) (“[R]egardless of the origin—i.e., domestic or foreign—of a statement, it cannot be admitted at trial in the United States if the statement was ‘compelled.’” Similarly, it does not matter whether the defendant is a U.S. citizen or a foreign national: ‘no person’ tried in the civilian courts of the United States can be compelled ‘to be a witness against himself.’”) (citation omitted). See also United States v. Jefferson, 594 F. Supp. 2d 655, 670 n.25 (E.D. Va. 2009); David Cole, Are Foreign Nationals Entitled to the Same Constitutional Rights As Citizens?, 25 Jefferson L. Rev. 367, 388 (2003) (analyzing the issue and finding that U.S. and foreign citizens enjoy the same general privileges and protections under the U.S. Constitution).

22. United States v. Stokes, 726 F.3d 880, 890 (7th Cir. 2013) (“Evidence obtained in a search of an American citizen by foreign authorities operating within their own country is generally admissible in the courts of the United States even if the search does not otherwise comply with our law, including the law of the Fourth Amendment.”) (collecting cases); United States v. Behety, 32 F.3d 503 (11th Cir. 1994) (holding that U.S. authorities’ presence during Guatemalan officials’ search of a U.S. vessel and action of tipping Guatemalan authorities that the vessel may contain cocaine was insufficient to constitute “substantial participation,” which would have triggered the Fourth Amendment reasonableness standard for evaluating the search); In re Request for Assistance from Ministry of Legal Affairs of Trinidad & Tobago, 848 F.2d 1151, 1156 (11th Cir. 1988) (abrogated on other grounds) (refusing to quash a subpoena the court issued pursuant to a request for legal assistance from a foreign government; the court “must decide whether the evidence would be discoverable in the foreign country before granting assistance”); United States v. Callaway, 446 F.2d 753 (3d Cir. 1971) (ruling that U.S. courts may exclude evidence gathered by foreign governments only (1) where there is joint action by both the U.S. and foreign governments and (2) where solo actions by the foreign government “shock the conscience” of the U.S. court).

23. Civil depositions do not trigger the Sixth Amendment. See generally United States v. Hayes, 231 F.3d 663, 674 (9th Cir. 2000) (holding that the right to counsel had not attached, even after the government had sought to obtain material witness depositions for use at the defendant’s trial).

- information concerning the identity and location of a person to be served, that person’s relationship to the proceeding, and the manner in which service is to be made;
- information on the identity and whereabouts of a person to be located;
- a precise description of the place or person to be searched and items to be seized;
- a description of the manner in which any testimony or statement is to be taken and recorded;
- a list of questions to be asked of a witness; and
- a description of any particular procedure to be followed in executing the request.

An MLAT request containing this information provides the district court with a general basis for evaluating the request for assistance. If necessary, the court may ask the assigned prosecutor to provide additional information (typically through OIA).

B. Statutory Scheme

1. 28 U.S.C. § 1782

Originally enacted in the mid-nineteenth century to encourage reciprocal assistance with transnational litigation, the statute now codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1782 permits federal courts to provide cross-border assistance via MLATs.²⁴ It sets forth specific procedures courts and prosecutors must follow:

a) The district court of the district in which a person resides or is found may order him to give his testimony or statement or to produce a document or other thing for use in a proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal, including criminal investigations conducted before formal accusation. . . . The order may prescribe the practice and procedure, which may be in whole or part the practice and procedure of the foreign country or the international tribunal, for taking the testimony or statement or producing the document or other thing. To the extent that the order does not prescribe otherwise, the testimony or statement shall be taken, and the document or other thing produced, in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.²⁵

Section 1782 allows any “interested person” from any country who is involved in a “proceeding in a foreign or international tribunal” to apply—whether through an MLAT or letter rogatory—to a U.S. court to obtain evidence for use in that non-U.S. civil or criminal proceeding. Section 1782 is broader than the Hague Evidence Convention and does not require the foreign litigant to first request the discovery from the non-U.S. tribunal.²⁶ Section 1782 gives courts discretion as to “whether, and to what extent, to honor a request for assistance.”²⁷

24. See generally Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 247–49 (2004) (detailing the history of § 1782); Fed. Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136, 147–48 (2d Cir. 2022) (discussing the discretionary factors that a court considers when ruling on a § 1782 request). See also Rebecca J. Hamilton, Future-Proofing U.S. Law for War Crimes Investigations in the Digital Era, 57 Ga. L. Rev. 1505, 1525 (2023).

25. 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (emphasis added).

26. See In re Premises Located at 840 140th Ave. NE, Bellevue, Wash., 634 F.3d 557, 571 (9th Cir. 2011) (“We hold that requests for assistance via the U.S.-Russia MLAT utilize the procedural mechanisms of § 1782 without importing the substantive limitations of § 1782. In particular, the parties to the treaty intended that the district courts would not possess the normal ‘broad discretion,’ conferred by § 1782, to deny requests for assistance.”).

27. See id. at 563. See also Alejandro A. Nava Cuenca, Debunking the Myths: International Commercial Arbitration and Section 1782(a), 46 Yale J. Int’l L. 155, 171–72 (2021).

2. 18 U.S.C. § 3512

The Foreign Evidence Request Efficiency Act, codified in 2009 at 18 U.S.C. § 3512, was enacted to help streamline the MLAT process, making it “easier for the United States to respond to requests by allowing them to be centralized and by putting the process for handling them within a clear statutory system.”²⁸

The assistance contemplated by § 3512 includes, but is not limited to,

- (A) a search warrant, as provided under Rule 41 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure;²⁹
- (B) a warrant or order for contents of stored wire or electronic communications or for records related thereto, as provided under section 2703 of [title 28];
- (C) an order for a pen register or trap and trace device, as provided under section 3123 of [title 28]; or
- (D) an order requiring the appearance of a person for the purpose of providing testimony or a statement, or requiring the production of documents or other things, or both.³⁰

To process the foreign request for assistance, the assistant U.S. attorney will review and approve the request and then, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3512, will file it with the U.S. district court

- (1) in the district where the person who may be required to appear resides or is located or in which the documents or things to be produced are located;
- (2) in cases in which the request seeks the appearance of persons or production of documents or things that may be located in multiple districts, in any one of the districts in which such a person, documents, or things may be located; or
- (3) in any case, the district in which a related Federal criminal investigation or prosecution is being conducted, or in the District of Columbia.³¹

As it does under 28 U.S.C. § 1782, under 18 U.S.C. § 3512, the court has discretion over whether to issue the requested order.³²

The application to provide the requested assistance, like all such filings, may be submitted ex parte and under seal.³³ Section 3512 also permits the appointment of an outside individual—sometimes referred to as a “commissioner”³⁴—“to direct the taking of testimony or statements or of the production

28. 155 Cong. Rec. S6810 (daily ed. June 18, 2009) (statement of Sen. Whitehouse); Fed. Republic of Nigeria, 27 F.4th at 150 (“The new statute made explicit what courts had long held was authorized under § 1782 – for example, that a federal judge may order ‘the appearance of a person for the purpose of providing testimony or a statement, or requiring the production of documents or other things,’ 18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)(2)(D), or appoint a person to direct the taking of testimony or the production of documents, id. § 3512(b)(1).”).

29. Note, however, that a district court’s authorization to issue search warrants under this section is subject to certain restrictions, namely, that the foreign offense for which the evidence is sought involves conduct that, if committed in the United States, would be considered an offense punishable by imprisonment for more than one year under federal or state law. 18 U.S.C. § 3512(e).

30. 18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)(2).

31. Id. § 3512(c).

32. Id. § 3512(a)(1) (providing that “a Federal judge may issue such orders as may be necessary to execute a request from a foreign authority . . .”) (emphasis added); § 3512(a)(2) (“Any order issued by a Federal judge pursuant to paragraph (1) may include the issuance of [non-exhaustive list of orders].”) (emphasis added).

33. See generally Robert Timothy Reagan, Federal Judicial Center, Sealing Court Records and Proceedings: A Pocket Guide (2010), https://www.fjc.gov/sites/default/files/2012/Sealing_Guide.pdf (noting the court’s wide discretion in whether to grant an ex parte motion to seal).

34. While the statute does not require the commissioner to be a lawyer or prosecutor, courts routinely appoint an of documents or other things, or both.”³⁵ A commissioner may pursue requests in multiple judicial districts, eliminating the need for judges in different districts to appoint separate commissioners and otherwise duplicate their efforts.³⁶ Section 3512 also permits judges to oversee and approve subpoenas and other orders (but not search warrants) outside of their district.

Under § 3512, federal judges continue to serve as gatekeepers for search warrants, wiretaps, and other methods of obtaining evidence, ensuring that the collection of requested foreign evidence meets the same standards as those required in U.S. cases (such as the probable cause standard, specificity in warrants, and protection of attorney-client, physician-patient, and other recognized privileges).³⁷

C. Judicial Review of Requests for Mutual Legal Assistance

Although there is a presumption in favor of honoring MLAT requests,³⁸ the district court must still review the terms of each request, checking that they comply with the terms of the underlying treaty and comport with U.S. law.³⁹ For example, in United Kingdom v. United States,⁴⁰ appellants awaiting trial in England requested disclosure of law enforcement documents they claimed were requested by British law enforcement officials pursuant to the U.S.-U.K. MLAT. The Eleventh Circuit denied the motion, finding that the underlying U.K. request for evidence did not conform to the specific protocol set forth in the treaty and, accordingly, no valid MLAT request had been made.⁴¹

U.S. courts will also consider constitutional challenges to a request for legal assistance. Although such cases are rare, “a district court may not enforce a subpoena that would offend a constitutional guarantee,” such as a subpoena that would result in an “egregious violation of human rights.”⁴²

D. Legal Issues

Although most requests for assistance pursuant to an MLAT proceed uneventfully, courts sometimes are called upon to resolve related legal issues, such as dual criminality, defense access to evidence located abroad, delay, and statute of limitations.

assistant U.S. attorney to be the commissioner. See 18 U.S.C. § 3512(b)(1) (“In response to an application for execution of a request from a foreign authority as described under subsection (a), a Federal judge may also issue an order appointing a person to direct the taking of testimony or statements or of the production of documents or other things, or both”) (emphasis added). See, e.g., United States v. Trs. of Boston Coll., 831 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Mass. 2011) (appointing an assistant United States attorney as the commissioner); In re Request from U.K. Pursuant to Treaty Between Gov’t of U.S. & Gov’t of U.K. on Mut. Assistance in Crim. Matters in the Matter of Dolours Price, 685 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2012) (same).

35. 18 U.S.C. § 3512(b). See also Bruce Zagaris, Int’l Tax Enforcement Cooperation and Int’l Human Rights, 39 Int’l Enf’t L. Rep. 203 (2023).

36. See 18 U.S.C. § 3512(b)(2), (f).

37. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (“A person may not be compelled to give his testimony or statement or to produce a document or other thing in violation of any legally applicable privilege.”). In re Request from U.K. Pursuant to Treaty Between Gov’t of U.S. & Gov’t of U.K. on Mut. Assistance in Crim. Matters in the Matter of Dolours Price, 718 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2013) (conducting a relevancy analysis of subpoenaed materials).

38. In re Premises Located at 840 140th Ave. NE, Bellevue, Wash., 634 F.3d 557, 571 (9th Cir. 2011) (“When a request for assistance under the MLAT arrives before a district court . . . almost all the factors already would point to the conclusion that the district court should grant the request.”). See also Peace, supra note 20.

39. See Kendall & Funk, supra note 15, at 2 (discussing the role of district courts as gatekeepers).

40. 238 F.3d 1312, 1315 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied sub nom. Raji v. United States, 534 U.S. 891 (2001).

41. Id. at 1317.

42. In re Premises, 634 F.3d at 572.

1. Dual Criminality

Unlike extradition treaties enforced in U.S. courts, MLATs do not require dual criminality—that the offense for which the foreign state seeks assistance also constitutes a crime in the requested state. The utilitarian reason for this deviation from the norm is to facilitate responsiveness.

MLATs, after all, are intended to improve law enforcement cooperation between countries, and the United States’ law enforcement objectives often depend upon timely assistance from treaty signatories. The United States has committed to responding to requests under MLATs even if the doctrine of dual criminality exists as part of the requesting country’s domestic law.⁴³ This approach establishes a high standard of responsiveness, enabling the United States to “urge that foreign authorities respond to our requests for evidence with comparable speed.”⁴⁴ Most MLATs expressly state that the dual (also known as “double”) criminality principle does not apply.⁴⁵

Some MLATs, however, are drafted to include limitations that are triggered if the requested assistance requires a court warrant or other compulsion and the underlying offense is not a crime in the requested country. In jurisdictions where domestic law requires dual criminality for international treaties, the MLAT is often drafted to include a nonexclusive list of covered offenses that allow for mutual legal assistance.

2. Defense Access to Evidence Located Abroad

The MLAT process was created to facilitate international cooperation in the investigation and prosecution of criminal cases. Each treaty’s terms apply only to the contracting nations’ parties, and the benefits conferred are available only to the governmental officials of those nations.

The first three MLATs signed by the United States—those with Switzerland,⁴⁶ Turkey, and the Netherlands—include provisions granting defense counsel permission to access evidence pursuant to an MLAT. Subsequent MLATs do not include comparable provisions.⁴⁷

Thus, access to evidence through an MLAT is restricted to prosecutors, government agencies investigating criminal conduct, and government agencies responsible for matters ancillary to criminal conduct, including civil forfeiture. In fact, the vast majority of MLATs signed by the United States explicitly exclude non-government access to U.S. processes.⁴⁸ Criminal defendants, like civil litigants,

43. United States v. Trs. of Boston Coll., 831 F. Supp. 2d 435, 450 (D. Mass. 2011), aff’d in part, rev’d in part sub nom. In re Request from U.K. Pursuant to Treaty Between Gov’t of U.S. & Gov’t of U.K. on Mut. Assistance in Crim. Matters in the Matter of Dolours Price, 685 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2012).

44. Id.

45. In re Commissioner’s Subpoenas, 325 F.3d 1287, 1299 (11th Cir. 2003). See also sources cited supra note 2; Basil Gupta & Ayush Mangal, Dethroned Adani, Unstabilised Market and Distressed Investors: The Domino Effect of Adani-Hindenburg Saga, 16 NUJS L. Rev. 74, 98–99 (2023).

46. In a case involving the MLAT between the United States and Switzerland, the defense counsel requested the government’s assistance with securing witness testimony via the MLAT process. Agreeing with the defense argument that the proffered evidence was important to its case, the court ordered the Department of Justice to provide the requested assistance. United States v. Sindona, 636 F.2d 792 (2d Cir. 1980). The reasoning of this case is limited to MLATs that provide for defense access to evidence abroad, such as those with Switzerland, Turkey, and the Netherlands. All other MLATs include language explicitly restricting defense access. See also L. Song Richardson, Convicting the Innocent in Transnational Criminal Cases: A Comparative Institutional Analysis Approach to the Problem, 26 Berkeley J. Int’l L. 62, 84 (2008); United States v. Chitron Elecs. Co., 668 F. Supp. 2d 298, 306 (D. Mass. 2009) (discussing U.S.-China MLAT).

47. United Kingdom v. United States, 238 F.3d 1312, 1317 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied sub nom. Raji v. United States, 534 U.S. 891 (2001).

48. See Fed. Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136, 151 (2d Cir. 2022):

must use letters rogatory to secure evidence located abroad, a process that is less efficient and less reliable.⁴⁹

Federal prosecutors increasingly rely on extraterritoriality provisions in federal law, such as those incorporated into the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act,⁵⁰ to bring cases in which much of the physical evidence and most potential witnesses are located overseas. Because the MLAT process is only available to the prosecution, the defendant's ability to collect and present evidence is limited.

Commentators have noted that the lack of compulsion parity between prosecutors and the defense in obtaining foreign evidence has due process implications.⁵¹ Counsel for the defense may argue that a vital piece of exculpatory evidence is located overseas and the MLAT process is the only realistic way of obtaining it. Counsel may request that the government assist with accessing this evidence through the MLAT process, and if the prosecution refuses, counsel may petition the court for relief.⁵² However, few, if any, courts have been receptive to such petitions in the absence of language in the MLAT that provides for defense access to evidence abroad.

In United States v. Mejia, the defendants were involved in a cross-border drug trafficking organization run out of Costa Rica. A grand jury in the District of Columbia indicted the Colombian nationals, charging them with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.⁵³ Panamanian authorities arrested two of the defendants, turning the men over to the custody of the United States. During pretrial proceedings, the two defendants petitioned the trial court to require that the government produce tape recordings made during the Costa Rican trial of one of their alleged (non-testifying) coconspirators. The Ordinarily, absent protest or objection by the offended sovereign, an individual has no standing to raise the violation of international law, including treaties, as an issue, unless the treaty creates privately enforceable rights or gives some other indication that the intent of the treaty drafters was to confer rights that could be vindicated in the manner sought by affected individuals.

(internal quotation marks and citation omitted); United States v. Duboc, 694 F.3d 1223, 1229–30 (11th Cir. 2012) (“[T]here is a presumption that international agreements do not create private rights or private causes of action in domestic courts, even when the agreement directly benefits private persons.”) (citing United States v. Valencia-Trujillo, 573 F.3d 1171, 1180–81 (11th Cir. 2009)).

49. See generally United Kingdom, 238 F.3d at 1314 (explaining that there is no provision for private parties, such as individual criminal defendants in the English (or American) courts, to request the production of information). See also Peace, supra note 20, at 420 (“[L]etters rogatory as a means for obtaining evidence are often inefficient and unreliable.”).

50. 15 U.S.C. §§ 78dd-1 et seq. See generally T. Markus Funk & Bo Dul, Regrouping and Refocusing: 2013 FCPA Year-In-Review and Enforcement Trends for 2014, Bloomberg BNA Sec. Reg. & L. Rep., 46 SRLR 121 (Jan. 20, 2014).

51. See Wexler, supra note 3, at 1361; Daniel Huff, Witness for the Defense: The Compulsory Process Clause as a Limit on Extraterritorial Criminal Jurisdiction, 15 Tex. Rev. L. & Pol. 129, 160–61 (2010); Robert Neale Lyman, Note, Compulsory Process in a Globalized Era: Defendant Access to Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties, 47 Va. J. Int'l L. 261, 273 (2006); Richardson, supra note 46, at 84–85; Ian R. Conner, Note, Peoples Divided: The Application of United States Constitutional Protections in International Criminal Law Enforcement, 11 Wm. & Mary Bill Rts. J. 495, 503–04 (2002); Frank Tuerkheimer, Globalization of U.S. Law Enforcement: Does the Constitution Come Along?, 39 Hous. L. Rev. 307, 357–73 (2002). See also United States v. Theresius Filippi, 918 F.2d 244, 247 (1st Cir. 1990) (implicating the Due Process Clause by not requesting Special Interest Parole from the INS).

52. If the Department of Justice refuses to use an MLAT to execute a Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 15 court order authorizing a criminal defendant to take a deposition abroad (instead telling the defendant to seek enforcement of the order through a letter rogatory), the defendant may contend that the refusal violates the defendant's rights under the Compulsory Process Clause of the Sixth Amendment. Defendants may also cite the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which the United States became a party in 1992. The Covenant provides, in part: “In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality: To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him.” International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, art. 14, § 3, Dec. 19, 1966, 999 U.N.T.S. 171, https://treaties.un.org/doc/Treaties/1976/03/19760323%2006-17%20AM/Ch_IV_04.pdf.

53. United States v. Mejia, 448 F.3d 436 (D.C. Cir. 2006).

defendants conceded that the tapes were not within the U.S. government’s “possession, custody, or control” within the meaning of Rule 16 but argued that the prosecution had “the power” to secure the trial tapes or transcripts from the Costa Rican government via the U.S.-Costa Rican MLAT.⁵⁴ The trial court rejected the defendants’ request, ruling that the government had no obligation to use its “best efforts” through the MLAT to obtain the tapes.⁵⁵

On appeal, the D.C. Circuit found that the government satisfied its sole obligation: compliance with Rule 16. The court did note that pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1781(b)(2), the defendants “could have asked the district court to issue letters rogatory to the Costa Rican court to obtain any tapes or transcripts that may have existed, [but did] not do so.”⁵⁶ This language may leave open the argument that had the defendants first sought the requested evidence using the letter rogatory process, the outcome (or at least the analysis) might have been different.⁵⁷

Courts have consistently held that MLATs create no private rights permitting an individual defendant to force the government to request evidence pursuant to an MLAT, even when the defendant invokes constitutional concerns.⁵⁸ In United States v. Jefferson, Jefferson argued that the Sixth Amendment required the government to utilize the MLAT process to obtain depositions for the defense.⁵⁹ The district court disagreed, stating that “it is clear that defendant is not entitled to make use of the MLA Treaty and that this result does not violate defendant’s constitutional right to compulsory process.”⁶⁰

Likewise, the Eleventh Circuit rejected a challenge to a forfeiture order by a defendant who asserted that the government did not follow the provisions of the MLAT between Thailand and the United States.⁶¹ The court noted the “presumption that international agreements do not create private rights” and held that the defendant, as a private party, could not use the MLAT as a defense to the forfeiture.⁶² The First Circuit similarly rejected an argument that an MLAT allowed for a private right of action, citing both the language of the U.S.-U.K. MLAT itself and the fact that other courts have “uniformly” ruled that no such private right exists under the language of similar MLATs.⁶³

Prosecutors may, however, on occasion voluntarily offer their assistance in obtaining foreign

54. Id. at 444.

55. Id.

56. Id. at 445.

57. See id. (citing United States v. Sensi, 879 F.2d 888, 899 (D.C. Cir. 1989)). But see Euromepa S.A. v. R. Esmerian, Inc., 51 F.3d 1095, 1098 (2d Cir. 1995) (declining to engraft a “quasi-exhaustion requirement” into § 1782 that would force litigants to seek “information through the foreign or international tribunal” before requesting discovery from the district court); In re Veiga, 746 F. Supp. 2d 8, 24 (D.D.C. 2010) (same).

58. See, e.g., United States v. McLellan, 959 F.3d 442, 476 (1st Cir. 2020) (“[T]he district court does not have the authority to compel the government to issue MLAT requests. Nor is the ‘onus’ on the government in this case to ‘make it possible’ for the defendant to obtain, via an MLAT request, evidence that he cannot establish is favorable to his case.”) (citation omitted).

59. United States v. Jefferson, 594 F. Supp. 2d 655, 673 (E.D. Va. 2009).

60. Id.

61. United States v. Duboc, 694 F.3d 1223, 1229 (11th Cir. 2012), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1177 (2013), reh’g denied, 569 U.S. 969 (2013).

62. 694 F.3d at 1229–30.

63. In re Request from U.K. Pursuant to Treaty Between Gov’t of U.S. & Gov’t of U.K. on Mut. Assistance in Crim. Matters in the Matter of Dolours Price, 685 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2012), cert. denied sub nom. Moloney v. United States, 569 U.S. 942 (2013). See also Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 506 n.3 (2008) (discussing the “background presumption” that “[i]nternational agreements, even those directly benefitting private persons, generally do not create private rights or provide for a private cause of action in domestic courts”) (citation omitted).

evidence via the MLAT process as a means of expediting discovery.⁶⁴ This can lead to unusual situations, however. In one recent case, the Indian government rejected the defendants' letters rogatory and requested that the discovery requests be submitted under the MLAT process. Prosecutors argued that they would like to comply with that request, but OIA (which oversees MLAT requests) said it was impermissible under the treaty. The court challenged OIA's analysis and requested that the prosecutors confer with OIA to see if it would reassess its opinion. OIA relented, and MLAT requests were issued soon thereafter.⁶⁵ How such voluntary prosecutorial offers will be handled by OIA in the future remains to be seen.

3. Delay

Obtaining evidence through the use of formal MLATs between nations can be time-consuming and may result in government requests for additional time. The main difficulties are the required level of legal formality and the availability of resources, such as staff and funding. In more complex cases, as well as those involving technology, another potential cause of delay is the limited capacity of some foreign law enforcement agencies to conduct the sophisticated forensic analysis needed to comply with an MLAT request.⁶⁶

In other cases, the foreign country may simply have more limited experience with the evidence-gathering process. United States v. $93,110.00 in U.S. Currency,⁶⁷ for example, involved an action for civil forfeiture with evidence located in Mexico. Although the case had been pending for almost three years, the U.S. government requested additional time to gather evidence, citing the "significant challenges" in obtaining formal discovery from Mexico despite numerous inquiries. Noting the government's due diligence, the court granted the request but also stated that it would rely on its inherent authority to control the scheduling of pre-trial proceedings and deny any future MLAT-based extension requests.⁶⁸

Although district courts are involved in overseeing incoming MLAT requests, they have no direct oversight over requests sent from the United States to a foreign country. A court may sometimes become indirectly involved in an outgoing MLAT process, however, such as when delays in processing impact the management of a domestic case or present speedy trial issues. If an MLAT request issued by the Department of Justice threatens to result in unacceptable delays in or burdens on a court proceeding, the court may suggest that the government either (1) forgo obtaining certain evidence or (2) limit its request to essential evidence, thereby ensuring that requests are processed expeditiously.

4. Statute of Limitations

When the government seeks evidence from abroad prior to the return of an indictment, it files an ex parte application with the court to toll the statute of limitations pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3292. The court

64. See generally United States v. Des Marteau, 162 F.R.D. 364 (M.D. Fla. 1995); see also United States v. Tao, No. 19-cr-20052, 2021 WL 5205446, at *8 (D. Kan. Nov. 9, 2021).

65. United States v. Coburn, No. 2:19-cr-00120 (D.N.J.).

66. See generally Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, Child Exploitation and Trafficking: Examining Global Challenges and U.S. Responses (2012), at 215 (suggesting that, because of these challenges, it is often preferable to request that the foreign authorities "simply ship the entire seized hard drive to the United States"); Jeffrey Simser, Asset Recovery and Kleptocracy, 17 J. Fin. Crime 321, 324 (2010) ("Money moves across borders in a fraction of a second; the MLAT process can be slow. Cooperation can be difficult.").

67. No. CV-08-1499-PHX-LOA, 2010 WL 2745065 (D. Ariz. July 12, 2010).

68. Id.

must find by a preponderance of the evidence that “it reasonably appears” the evidence is located in the foreign country,⁶⁹ and the tolling of the statute may not exceed three years.⁷⁰ The suspension of the statute of limitations begins on the date that the MLAT request is made; it ends when the foreign government takes its final action on the request.⁷¹ Section 3292 does not provide the defendant with a right to notice that the statute of limitations is being suspended or a hearing on the issue.⁷²

In United States v. Lyttle, the court rejected the defendant’s claim that tolling the statute of limitations was improper because the documents in question could have been obtained through the U.S. branch of a Hungarian bank via domestic subpoena duces tecum rather than the more time-consuming MLAT process.⁷³ Looking at the “plain text” of § 3292, the court found no requirement that the foreign evidence be obtainable only through diplomatic channels in order for the statute of limitations to be tolled.⁷⁴

Although § 3292 incorporates a low evidentiary threshold, the court must nevertheless scrutinize government requests to have the statute of limitations tolled. In United States v. Wilson,⁷⁵ the defendant was indicted in 1998 for an international money laundering conspiracy involving the Bahamas. The defendant filed a motion to dismiss, arguing that the prosecution was time-barred. Contesting this motion, the government pointed to a 1994 court order suspending the limitations period beginning in 1993, when OIA made an official request for Wilson’s financial records from a Nassau bank, pursuant to the U.S.-Bahamas MLAT. Wilson challenged the government’s assertion, arguing that the proffered copy of the letter of request and the government’s “representation” that the letter was sent were inadequate.⁷⁶ The Fifth Circuit ruled that the evidence raised a factual issue concerning whether the government actually sent the discovery request to the Bahamas, and it remanded the case for an evidentiary hearing.⁷⁷

On remand, the government failed to produce any documentary evidence that the letter of request

69. See United States v. Trainor, 376 F.3d 1325, 1336 (11th Cir. 2004) (“[T]he Government must present some evidence—something of evidentiary value—that it reasonably appears the requested evidence is in a foreign country.”).

70. See, e.g., United States v. Lyttle, 667 F.3d 220, 224 (2d Cir. 2012):

[Section 3292] requires a district court to suspend the running of a statute of limitations upon an appropriate application showing: (1) that evidence of an offense being investigated by a grand jury is in a foreign country; and (2) that such evidence has been officially requested. According to the statute, the preponderance-of-the-evidence standard applies when determining whether the United States has made an official request. When deciding whether the evidence is in a foreign country, however, a lower standard applies: a court must find by a preponderance of the evidence . . . that it reasonably appears, or reasonably appeared at the time the request was made, that such evidence is, or was, in a foreign country.

Citation omitted.

71. 18 U.S.C. § 3292(b). See also Robert J. Peters et al., Not an Ocean Away, Only a Moment Away: A Prosecutor’s Primer for Obtaining Remotely Stored Data, 47 Mitchell Hamline L. Rev. 1072, 1117 (2021); David Farnham, Foreign Evidence and Tolling the Statute of Limitations, 29 Crim. Just. 27, 33 (2015).

72. See DeGeorge v. U.S. Dist. Court for Cent. Dist. Cal., 219 F.3d 930, 937 (9th Cir. 2000). See also United States v. Hoffecker, 530 F.3d 137, 168 (3d Cir. 2008) (“We find that there was nothing improper about the ex parte nature of the proceeding before the grand jury judge.”); United States v. Wilson, 249 F.3d 366, 371 (5th Cir. 2001) (“An application to toll the statute of limitations under § 3292 is a preindictment, ex parte proceeding.”), abrogated by Whitfield v. United States, 543 U.S. 209 (2005).

73. Lyttle, 667 F.3d at 224–25.

74. Id. at 225.

75. 249 F.3d 366 (5th Cir. 2001). See also United States v. Torres, 318 F.3d 1058, 1061 (11th Cir. 2003) (“Under § 3292, the government may apply, ex parte, for suspension of the statute of limitations when it seeks evidence located in a foreign country.”).

76. Wilson, 249 F.3d at 372.

77. Id. at 373.

was sent, nor did it offer testimony of individuals who issued or received the letter.⁷⁸ The district court, nevertheless, again denied Wilson’s motion to dismiss. The court of appeals, in turn, for a second time reversed the district court’s decision, pointing to the absence of “consistent procedures or practices at OIA during the time in question” and concluding that the district court improperly tolled the statute of limitations.⁷⁹

5. Impact of the 2018 CLOUD Act

The Clarifying Lawful Overseas Use of Data Act (“CLOUD Act”) (H.R. 4943, 115th Cong. (2018)) is a United States federal law enacted by the passing of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2018, Pub. L. No. 115-141, div. V, 132 Stat. 1213.

The CLOUD Act, which primarily amends the Stored Communications Act (SCA), Pub. L. No. 99-508, 100 Stat. 1860 (1986), permits federal law enforcement to compel U.S.-based technology companies via warrant or subpoena to provide requested data stored on servers regardless of whether the data is stored in the United States or overseas. It was enacted to address the difficulties agencies like the FBI had when seeking to obtain remote data through service providers using outdated SCA warrants (which were developed before cloud computing).

The CLOUD Act requires U.S. data and communication companies to, via a warrant, provide stored data for a customer or subscriber on any server they own and operate anywhere in the world. It also provides mechanisms for the companies or the courts to reject or challenge a request if they believe it violates the privacy rights of the foreign country where the data is stored.

Though a detailed analysis of the CLOUD Act is outside of the scope of this project, critics have argued that the CLOUD Act, in effect, has created a legal shortcut to circumvent the MLAT system and its privacy and due process safeguards.⁸⁰

78. The government introduced the testimony of a paralegal who did not work on the Wilson case but “claimed familiarity with the office policies and procedures in place in 1993 when OIA allegedly sent the MLAT request.” United States v. Wilson, 322 F.3d 353, 356 (5th Cir. 2003).

79. Id. at 362.

80. See, e.g., Halefom H. Abraha, How Compatible Is the US ‘CLOUD Act’ with Cloud Computing? A Brief Analysis, 9 Int’l Data Priv. L. 207, 213 (2019) (arguing that the CLOUD Act removes some of the layers of protections provided by the MLAT system such as the rigorous reviews by DOJ, Attorney General, and courts without providing equivalent safeguards. Hence, bypassing the MLAT system could be faster for law enforcement, but it diminishes privacy standards. This is especially true for individuals in countries where there is no adequate privacy protection[.]

and that the CLOUD Act does not disincentivize frustrated foreign governments to engage in “data localization” by requiring companies to store data on servers physically located within their national borders); Jennifer Daskal, Microsoft Ireland, the CLOUD Act, and International Lawmaking 2.0, 71 Stan. L. Rev. Online 9, 13–14 (2018) (“The CLOUD Act . . . provides a mechanism for select foreign governments to bypass the [cumbersome] MLAT system in their investigation of serious crime and directly request sought-after communications from U.S.-based providers . . .”).

III. Letters Rogatory

Letters rogatory (sometimes called “letters of request”) are formal requests for judicial assistance made by a court in one country to a court in another country.⁸¹ Once issued, they may be conveyed through diplomatic channels, or they may be sent directly from court to court.⁸² Letters rogatory are often used to obtain evidence, such as compelled testimony, that may not be accessible to a foreign criminal or civil litigant without judicial authorization. They are used primarily by non-government litigants who do not have access to the MLAT process. “While it has been held that federal courts have inherent power to issue and respond to letters rogatory, such jurisdiction has largely been regulated by congressional legislation.”⁸³

A. Outgoing

The letter rogatory process is less formal than pursuing evidence through an MLAT, but its execution can be more time-consuming. Outgoing letters rogatory—requests for assistance with obtaining evidence abroad, made by counsel through the U.S. court—are issued by the U.S. State Department pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1781 and provided for under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 28(b) and 4(f)(2)(B). Section 1781(b), however, also allows for a district court (and, for that matter, a foreign court) to bypass the State Department and transmit the outgoing letter rogatory directly to the foreign “tribunal, officer, or agency.”⁸⁴

Although not as common in practice, there is nothing in 28 U.S.C. § 1781 or otherwise preventing a state court from similarly issuing a letter rogatory (though it is possible that the responsiveness by some foreign courts may be reduced if they are not as familiar with the state court issuing the letter).

In most cases, foreign courts honor requests issued pursuant to letters rogatory. However, international judicial assistance is discretionary, based upon principles of comity rather than treaty, and is also subject to the requested country’s legal procedures. Compliance with a letter rogatory request is left to the discretion of the court or tribunal in the “requested” jurisdiction (that is, the court or tribunal to which the letter rogatory is addressed). For example, if a request for compelled testimony is granted by a foreign court, the taking of that testimony may not necessarily follow procedures similar

81. The rules for enforcement of letters rogatory were promulgated as part of the Hague Convention Relating to Civil Procedure, which was ratified by more than sixty countries, including the United States. See Hague Convention Relating to Civil Procedure, Mar. 1, 1954, 286 U.N.T.S. 265, <https://treaties.un.org/doc/Publication/UNTS/Volume%20286/volume-286-I-4173-English.pdf>. See also David Rubinstein, Judicial Assistance as Intended: Reconciling § 1782’s Present Practice with Its Past, 123 Colum. L. Rev. 513, 518–19 (2023) (discussing the history of letters rogatory); Eileen P. McCarthy, A Proposed Uniform Standard for U.S. Courts in Granting Requests for International Judicial Assistance, 15 Fordham Int’l L.J. 772, 778 (1991) (“Letters rogatory can be more effective than commissions because the executing courts have recourse to their own procedures to compel recalcitrant or reluctant witnesses to comply with their judicial decrees.”).

82. 28 U.S.C. § 1781. See also Morris H. Deutsch, Judicial Assistance: Obtaining Evidence in the United States, Under 28 U.S.C. § 1782, for Use in a Foreign or International Tribunal, 5 B.C. Int’l & Compar. L. Rev. 175, 179 (1982). Letters rogatory and accompanying documents may be submitted to the Office of Legal Affairs, U.S. Department of State, 2201 C Street N.W., SA-17, 10th Floor, Washington, DC 20522-1710. See generally U.S. Department of State, Preparation of Letters Rogatory, <https://travel.state.gov/content/travel/en/legal/travel-legal-considerations/internl-judicial-asst/obtaining-evidence/Preparation-Letters-Rogatory.html> (last visited March 1, 2024).

83. In re Letter Rogatory from Justice Court, Dist. of Montreal, Can., 523 F.2d 562, 564 (6th Cir. 1975) (citations omitted).

84. 28 U.S.C. § 1781(a) provides that the U.S. State Department is has the “power” to (1) use formal channels to transmit letters rogatory from foreign or international tribunals to the appropriate U.S. court and receive and return them after execution and (2) transmit letters rogatory from U.S. courts to the applicable foreign or international tribunal, officer, or agency and receive and return them after execution.

to those of the United States, such as through depositions.

Because the letter rogatory process is time-consuming and may involve unique issues of foreign procedural law, parties seeking evidence can arrange for local counsel in the foreign country to file the letter rogatory on their behalf, a strategy that may facilitate the process. The U.S. trial proceedings may be impacted by delays flowing from the foregoing procedural and practical hurdles.⁸⁵

B. Incoming

Incoming letters rogatory—requests for judicial assistance originating in a foreign or international tribunal—are also covered by 28 U.S.C. §§ 1781 and 1782. OIA receives incoming letters rogatory from foreign or international tribunals and transmits each request to the federal court in the district where the evidence is located or the witness resides.⁸⁶ After reviewing the request, the district court may order the taking of testimony or production of evidence for use in the foreign proceeding.⁸⁷ The evidence is then provided to the requesting foreign party by OIA.

The U.S. court may “prescribe the practice and procedure, which may be in whole or part the practice and procedure of the foreign country or the international tribunal, for taking the testimony or statement or producing the document or other thing.”⁸⁸ Or, if nothing in the request prescribes otherwise, the court may follow the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Legal privileges are respected, and privileged testimony cannot be compelled.⁸⁹ The process typically takes place ex parte, though a court has the authority to require notification of other parties in the foreign litigation prior to the issuance of an order.⁹⁰

U.S. courts have considerable discretion when reviewing incoming letters rogatory from foreign courts.⁹¹ The U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in *Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc.*⁹² involved a request to a U.S. district court for the production of documents to be used in a proceeding before a European administrative tribunal. The Supreme Court clarified the parameters of U.S. court assistance to foreign tribunals pursuant to §1782 and reiterated that district courts have broad discretion in allowing discovery that aids foreign proceedings.

85. The following statutory provisions also govern the issuance and processing of letters rogatory: the All Writs Act, codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1651; 28 U.S.C. §§ 1781 and 1782 (describing the transmittal of letters rogatory through the Department of State and through the district courts); 28 U.S.C. § 1696 (providing for the use of letters rogatory for service of process pursuant to a request by a foreign tribunal); and 22 C.F.R. 92.66 (detailing the consular procedures for transmittal of letters rogatory).

86. 28 U.S.C. § 1782. See also Loren M. Scolaro, Note, The Past, Present, and Future of United States-China Mutual Legal Assistance, 94 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 1688, 1697–98 (2019); Peter Swire & Justin D. Hemmings, Mutual Legal Assistance in an Era of Globalized Communications: The Analogy to the Visa Waiver Program, 71 N.Y.U. Ann. Surv. Am. L. 687, 691–92 (2016).

87. 28 U.S.C. § 1782(a).

88. Id.

89. See, e.g., United States v. Zubaydah, 595 U.S. 195, 212 (2022) (denying, on appeal, 28 U.S.C. § 1782 motion filed by Guantánamo Bay detainee seeking to obtain information for use in Polish litigation about his treatment at a CIA detention site, reasoning that “the state secrets privilege applies to the existence (or nonexistence) of a CIA facility in Poland.”).

90. See, e.g., In re Merck & Co., 197 F.R.D. 267, 271 (M.D.N.C. 2000). See also Yanbai Andrea Wang, Exporting American Discovery, 87 U. Chi. L. Rev. 2089, 2130 (2020).

91. See Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241, 264 (2004) (“As earlier emphasized, . . . a district court is not required to grant a § 1782(a) discovery application simply because it has the authority to do so.”); Four Pillars Enters. Co. v. Avery Dennison Corp., 308 F.3d 1075, 1078 (9th Cir. 2002) (“Congress gave the federal district courts broad discretion to determine whether, and to what extent, to honor a request for assistance under 28 U.S.C. § 1782.”).

92. 542 U.S. 241.

When reviewing an application made under §1782, a court should examine the nature of the foreign tribunal, the character of the proceedings, and the foreign government’s receptiveness to U.S. judicial assistance. It should also consider the following:

- Is the person from whom discovery is sought a participant in the foreign proceeding? “[T]he need for § 1782(a) aid generally is not as apparent as it ordinarily is when evidence is sought from a nonparticipant.”⁹³
- Does the request conceal “an attempt to circumvent foreign proof-gathering restrictions or other policies of a foreign country or the United States?”⁹⁴
- Is the request unduly intrusive or burdensome or made for the purpose of harassment?⁹⁵

The Intel decision also noted that, in some cases, a court may modify a discovery request to make it less burdensome.⁹⁶

C. Case Management

In contrast to MLATs, letters rogatory are not treaty based; there is no guarantee that the requested country or tribunal will act on a request for assistance or, if it acts, how it will act. When evaluating a defendant’s request for letters rogatory to secure evidence located abroad, courts consider the following factors:

- Is the proffered evidence exculpatory?
- Is it cumulative of evidence more readily available in the United States?
- Was the request for evidence made in a timely manner?⁹⁷

If the evidence in question is necessary to ensure a fair trial, obtaining it will most likely warrant the delay inherent in the letter rogatory process.⁹⁸

In United States v. Jefferson,⁹⁹ for example, Jefferson made a pretrial motion to depose witnesses located in Nigeria, arguing that their testimony would be exculpatory.¹⁰⁰ The witnesses would not consent to be deposed, and Jefferson sought an order requiring the government to invoke the MLAT between the United States and Nigeria or, in the alternative, requested that the court issue a letter rogatory.¹⁰¹ The court found the proffered witness testimony to be material, noncumulative, and potentially exculpatory.¹⁰² The government argued that Jefferson’s motion should be denied because he waited nearly a year after indictment before seeking the evidence and the trial would be delayed.

93. In re Clerici, 481 F.3d 1324, 1334 (11th Cir. 2007) (quoting Intel, 542 U.S. at 264).

94. Intel, 542 U.S. at 265. See also Fed. Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136, 153 (2d Cir. 2022) (“In the context of § 1782 and the third Intel factor, circumvention occurs where the applicant uses a § 1782 application to avoid measures [in the foreign country] that are intended to restrict certain means of gathering or using evidence.”) (emphasis in original).

95. See generally Intel, 542 U.S. at 264–65; In re Request for Assistance from Ministry of Legal Affairs of Trinidad & Tobago, 848 F.2d 1151, 1156 (11th Cir. 1988).

96. Intel, 542 U.S. at 265 (“[I]ntrusive or burdensome requests may be rejected or trimmed.”).

97. United States v. Dearden, 546 F.2d 622, 625 (5th Cir. 1977); United States v. Rosen, 240 F.R.D. 204, 213 (E.D. Va. 2007); United States v. Jefferson, 594 F. Supp. 2d 655, 673 (E.D. Va. 2009).

98. See Progressive Mins., LLC v. Rashid, No. 5:07-CV-108, 2009 WL 1789083, at *2 (N.D. W. Va. June 23, 2009); Rosen, 240 F.R.D. at 213.

99. 594 F. Supp. 2d 655.

100. Id. at 661.

101. Id.

102. Id. at 667–73.

Noting that the MLAT process was not available to the defense, the court agreed to issue a letter rogatory. The court found that the material nature of the evidence requested excused the delay required to obtain it. The court issued a letter rogatory to the appropriate Nigerian judicial authority, requesting that it ascertain the witnesses' willingness to waive their Fifth Amendment rights and answer questions fully in a later deposition—a compromise ruling tailored to the case.¹⁰³

The letter rogatory process may take as long as a year, presenting courts with case management challenges. Although delays may be mitigated by transmitting a copy of the request through INTERPOL or some other more direct route, even in urgent cases, such requests often take at least a month to execute. To minimize unnecessary delay, the court may choose to review outgoing letters rogatory or inquire of counsel whether steps were taken to ensure a response as expeditiously as possible.

1. Preliminary Information

Courts may consider the following issues when reviewing an outgoing letter rogatory:

- Did the party requesting the assistance review the country-specific judicial assistance information on the U.S. Department of State website and U.S. state and federal law relating to the subject to determine whether the requested assistance can, in fact, be rendered?
- Does the letter include unnecessary information that may confuse a court in the receiving foreign country?
- Is the request for assistance sufficiently specific so as not to resemble a fishing expedition?
- If the party making the request believes it is preferable for foreign courts to follow particular procedures, does the letter include specific instructions in this regard (for example, a verbatim transcript, witness testimony under oath, or permission for U.S. or foreign counsel to attend or participate in proceedings)?
- Has the party requesting the letter consulted the country-specific information for guidance about authentication procedures for the particular country (that is, are a judicial signature and seal sufficient)?

2. Essential Elements of a Letter Rogatory

In addition, to facilitate the process, courts should ensure that the letter includes the following:

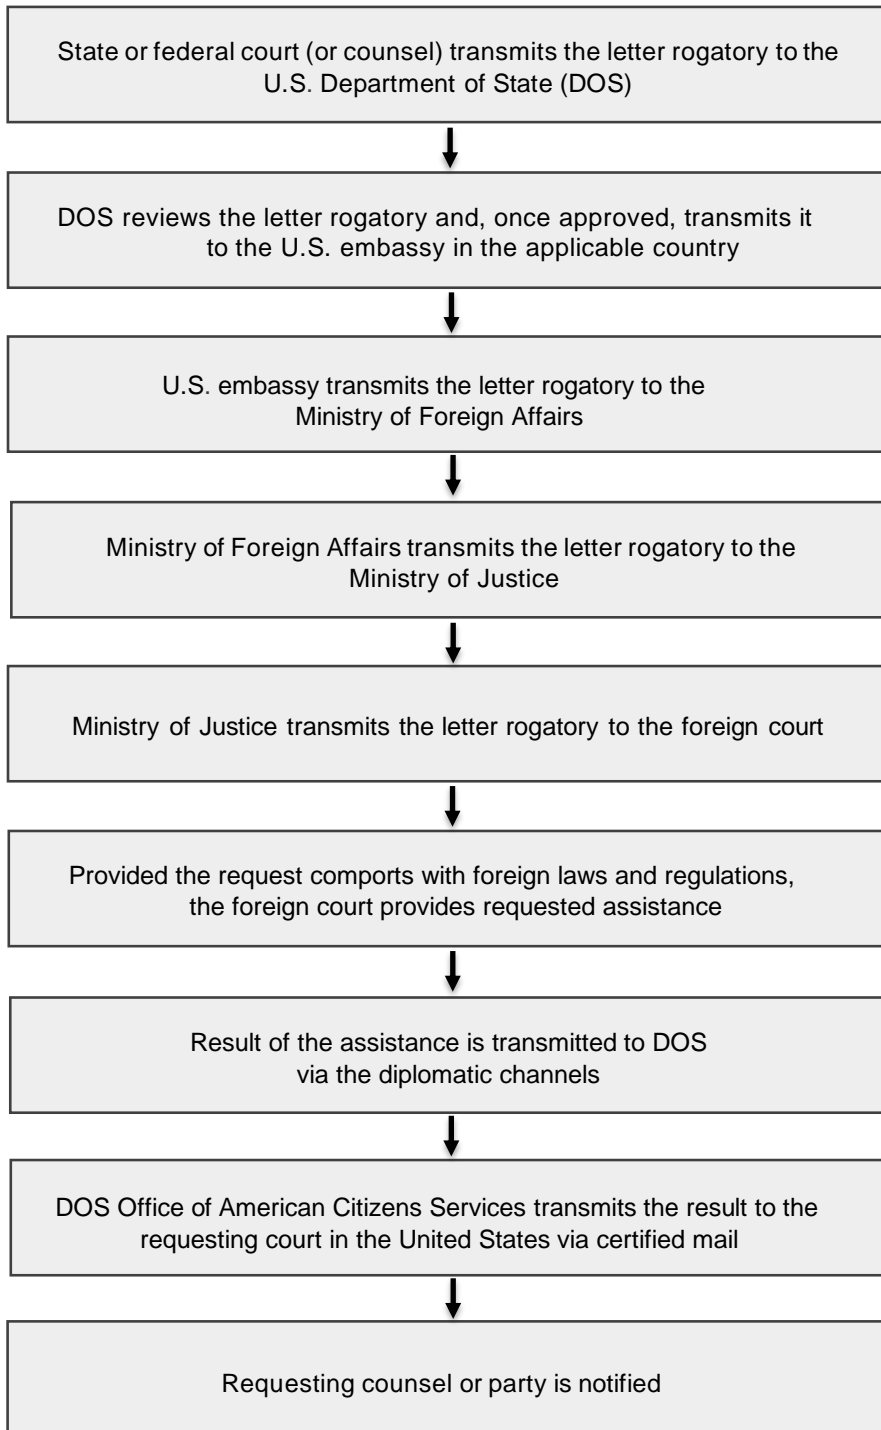

- a statement that the request for international judicial assistance is being made in the interests of justice;
- a brief synopsis of the case, including identification of the parties and the nature of the claim and relief sought, to enable the foreign court to understand the issues involved;
- the type of case (e.g., civil, criminal, or administrative);
- the nature of the assistance required (e.g., compel testimony or production of evidence, serve process);
- the name, address, and other identifiers, such as corporate title, of the person abroad to be served or from whom evidence is to be compelled and a description of any documents to be served;

103. Id. at 675–76.

- a list of questions to be asked, where applicable (generally in the form of written interrogatories);
- a statement from the requesting court expressing a willingness to provide similar reciprocal assistance to judicial authorities of the receiving state; and
- a statement that the requesting court or counsel is willing to reimburse the judicial authorities of the receiving state for any costs incurred in executing the requesting court's letter rogatory.

Figure 2 outlines the typical outgoing letter rogatory process, and the Appendix presents a sample letter rogatory from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Figure 2. Submitting a Letter Rogatory for Execution by a Foreign Court

IV. Information Exchange Through Informal Channels

Although formal MLATs, letters rogatory, and other international conventions are the “public face” of transnational legal assistance, a significant amount of criminal investigation-related information is exchanged through informal channels: investigator to investigator, prosecutor to prosecutor, defense counsel to local counterpart.¹⁰⁴ Indeed, personal, cooperative law enforcement relationships can be so informal and “off the grid” that law enforcement agencies, courts, and defendants may only learn of them by accident.

Responding to the challenges of transnational law enforcement, the FBI and other U.S. law enforcement agencies have aggressively sought to develop institutional relationships with their foreign counterparts. Teams of U.S. law enforcement officers regularly coordinate with each other and their foreign counterparts in a task force approach, often working out of offices in U.S. embassies and missions around the world. This “bricks and mortar” outreach enables U.S. law enforcement officials to cultivate professional relationships and more readily access other sources of information in the host countries.

The U.S. Departments of State, Treasury, and Justice institutionalize cross-border cooperation through memoranda of understanding (MOU) structured to improve the handling and sharing of law enforcement information in foreign jurisdictions. Although the benefits of this cooperation are significant, the process has limitations. Courts should be aware that information gathered in the informal manner described in this section may be incomplete and is not always tendered to prosecutors or provided to the defense through the discovery process.

V. Conclusion

Whether through MLATs, letters rogatory, or informal means, the process of obtaining evidence from abroad in criminal and civil cases can be time-consuming and frustrating to all parties involved, including the courts. Prepared with a basic understanding of how these transnational evidence-gathering tools operate, courts can plan for potential delays; evaluate the arguments made by the government, the defense, and civil litigants; and facilitate the evidence-gathering process in a manner that promotes fairness and conserves resources.

104. See generally Wendy Waldron & Michael I. Yoon, Obtaining Foreign Evidence in Child Sex Tourism Cases, 54 U.S. Att’y’s Bull. 30, 32 (Nov. 2006) (“[A]ny evidence that is not obtained through informal channels must be sought via letter rogatory [or MLAT]. This is a laborious process that may not bear fruit in a reasonable amount of time, so every effort should be made to obtain evidence by informal means.”), <https://famguardian.org/Publications/USAttyBulletins/usab5407.pdf>.

Appendix

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SAMPLE LETTER ROGATORY

NAME OF COURT IN SENDING STATE REQUESTING JUDICIAL ASSISTANCE

NAME OF PLAINTIFF

V. DOCKET NUMBER

NAME OF DEFENDANT

REQUEST FOR INTERNATIONAL JUDICIAL ASSISTANCE (LETTER ROGATORY)

(Name of the requesting court) presents its compliments to the appropriate judicial authority of (name of receiving state) and requests international judicial assistance to (obtain evidence/effect service of process) to be used in a (civil, criminal, administrative) proceeding before this court in the above captioned matter. A (trial/hearing) on this matter is scheduled at present for (date) in (city, state, country).

This court requests the assistance described herein as necessary in the interests of justice. The assistance requested is that the appropriate judicial authority of (name of receiving state) (compel the appearance of the below named individuals to give evidence/produce documents) (effect service of process upon the below named individuals).

(Names of witnesses/persons to be served) (Nationality of witnesses/persons to be served)

(Addresses of witnesses/persons to be served)

(Description of documents or other evidence to be produced)

Facts

(The facts of the case pending before the requesting court should be stated briefly here, including a list of those laws of the sending state that govern the matter pending before the court in the receiving state.)

(Questions)

(If the request is for evidence, the questions for the witnesses should be listed here.)

(List any special rights of witnesses pursuant to the laws of the requesting state here.)

(List any special methods or procedures to be followed.)

(Include a request for notification of time and place for examination of witnesses/documents before the court in the receiving state here.)

Reciprocity

(The requesting court should include a statement expressing a willingness to provide similar assistance to judicial authorities of the receiving state.)

Reimbursement for costs

(The requesting court should include a statement expressing a willingness to reimburse the judicial authorities of the receiving state for costs incurred in executing the requesting court's letters rogatory.)

Signature of requesting judge

Typed name of requesting judge

Name of requesting court

City, State, Country

Date

(Seal of court)

Recommended Resources

INTERNET SITES

INTERPOL: <https://www.interpol.int>.

U.S. Attorney's Manual Section on Letters Rogatory: <https://www.justice.gov/archives/jm/criminal-resource-manual-275-letters-rogatory>.

U.S. Department of Justice contact information: <https://www.justice.gov/contact-us>.

U.S. Department of Justice, Office of International Affairs home page: <https://www.justice.gov/criminal/criminal-oia>.

U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs, National Institute of Justice, International Center home page: <https://nij.ojp.gov/>.

U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Overseas Prosecutorial Development, Assistance & Training Program home page: <https://www.justice.gov/criminal/criminal-opdat>.

U.S. Department of State, Country-Specific Judicial Assistance Information: <https://travel.state.gov/content/travel/en/legal/Judicial-Assistance-Country-Information.html>.

U.S. Department of State, Preparation of Letters Rogatory: <https://travel.state.gov/content/travel/en/legal/travel-legal-considerations/international-judicial-assistance/obtaining-evidence/Preparation-Letters-Rogatory.html>.

U.S. Department of State, Office of the Legal Adviser, A List of Treaties and Other International Agreements of the United States in Force: <https://www.state.gov/treaties-in-force>.

BOOKS

Michael Abbell, Obtaining Evidence Abroad in Criminal Cases (2010).

American Bar Association, Obtaining Discovery Abroad (2d ed. 2006).

Gary B. Born & Peter B. Rutledge, International Civil Litigation in United States Courts (5th ed. 2011).

Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, Child Exploitation and Trafficking: Examining Global Challenges and U.S. Responses (2012).

David McClean, International Co-operation in Civil and Criminal Matters (2d ed. 2002).

Table of Authorities

CASES

DeGeorge v. U.S. Dist. Court for Cent. Dist. Cal., 219 F.3d 930 (9th Cir. 2000)	15
Euromepa S.A. v. R. Esmerian, Inc., 51 F.3d 1095 (2d Cir. 1995)	13
Federal Republic of Nigeria v. VR Advisory Servs., Ltd., 27 F.4th 136 (2d Cir. 2022)	passim
Four Pillars Enters. Co. v. Avery Dennison Corp., 308 F.3d 1075 (9th Cir. 2002)	18
In re Clerici , 481 F.3d 1324 (11th Cir. 2007).....	19
In re Commissioner’s Subpoenas , 325 F.3d 1287 (11th Cir. 2003).....	2, 5, 11
In re Letter of Request from Crown Prosecution Serv. of U.K. , 870 F.2d 686 (D.C. Cir. 1989).....	2, 3
In re Letter Rogatory from Justice Court, Dist. of Montreal, Can. , 523 F.2d 562 (6th Cir. 1975)	17
In re Merck & Co. , 197 F.R.D. 267 (M.D.N.C. 2000)	18
In re Premises Located at 840 140th Ave. NE, Bellevue, Wash. , 634 F.3d 557 (9th Cir. 2011)	8, 10
In re Request for Assistance from Ministry of Legal Affairs of Trinidad & Tobago , 848 F.2d 1151 (11th Cir. 1988).....	7, 19
In re Request from U.K. Pursuant to Treaty Between Gov’t of U.S. & Gov’t of U.K. on Mut. Assistance in Crim. Matters in the Matter of Dolours Price , 718 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2013).....	10
In re Terrorist Bombings of U.S. Embassies in E. Africa , 552 F.3d 177 (2d Cir. 2008)	7
In re Veiga , 746 F. Supp. 2d 8 (D.D.C. 2010)	13
Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro Devices, Inc., 542 U.S. 241 (2004)	8, 18, 19

Medellín v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491 (2008)	13
Morgenthau v. Avion Res. Ltd., 849 N.Y.S.2d 223 (App. Div. 2007)	2
Progressive Mins., LLC v. Rashid, No. 5:07-CV-108, 2009 WL 1789083 (N.D. W. Va. June 23, 2009)	19
United Kingdom v. United States, 238 F.3d 1312 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied sub nom. Raji v. United States , 534 U.S. 891 (2001).....	10, 11, 12
United States v. $93,110.00 in U.S. Currency, No. CV-08-1499-PHX-LOA, 2010 WL 2745065 (D. Ariz. July 12, 2010).....	14
United States v. Behety, 32 F.3d 503 (11th Cir. 1994)	7
United States v. Callaway, 446 F.2d 753 (3d Cir. 1971)	7
United States v. Chitron Elecs. Co., 668 F. Supp. 2d 298 (D. Mass. 2009).....	11
United States v. Coburn, No. 2:19-cr-00120 (D.N.J.)	14
United States v. Dearden, 546 F.2d 622 (5th Cir. 1977)	19
United States v. Des Marteau, 162 F.R.D. 364 (M.D. Fla. 1995).....	14
United States v. Duboc, 694 F.3d 1223 (11th Cir. 2012).....	12, 13
United States v. Hayes, 231 F.3d 663 (9th Cir. 2000)	7
United States v. Hoffecker, 530 F.3d 137 (3d Cir. 2008)	15
United States v. Jefferson, 594 F. Supp. 2d 655 (E.D. Va. 2009).....	7, 13, 19, 20
United States v. Lyttle, 667 F.3d 220 (2d Cir. 2012)	15

United States v. McLellan, 959 F.3d 442 (1st Cir. 2020).....	13
United States v. Mejia, 448 F.3d 436 (D.C. Cir. 2006).....	12, 13
United States v. Rommy, 506 F.3d 108 (2d Cir. 2007)	5
United States v. Rosen, 240 F.R.D. 204 (E.D. Va. 2007)	19
United States v. Sensi, 879 F.2d 888 (D.C. Cir. 1989).....	13
United States v. Sindona, 636 F.2d 792 (2d Cir. 1980)	11
United States v. Stokes, 726 F.3d 880 (7th Cir. 2013)	7
United States v. Tao, No. 19-cr-20052, 2021 WL 5205446 (D. Kan. Nov. 9, 2021).....	14
United States v. Theresius Filippi, 918 F.2d 244 (1st Cir. 1990).....	12
United States v. Torres, 318 F.3d 1058 (11th Cir. 2003).....	15
United States v. Trainor, 376 F.3d 1325 (11th Cir. 2004).....	15
United States v. Trs. of Boston Coll., 831 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Mass. 2011).....	10, 11, 13
United States v. Valencia-Trujillo, 573 F.3d 1171 (11th Cir. 2009).....	12
United States v. Wilson, 249 F.3d 366 (5th Cir. 2001), abrogated by Whitfield v. United States, 543 U.S. 209 (2005).....	15
United States v. Wilson, 322 F.3d 353 (5th Cir. 2003)	16
United States v. Zubaydah, 595 U.S. 195 (2022)	18

Yellow Pages Photos, Inc. v. Ziplocal, LP, 795 F.3d 1255 (11th Cir. 2015).....	2
ZF Auto. US, Inc. v. Luxshare, Ltd., 596 U.S. 619 (2022)	2

STATUTES

15 U.S.C. §§ 78dd-1 et seq.	12
18 U.S.C. § 3292	15
18 U.S.C. § 3292(b)	15
18 U.S.C. § 3512	9, 10
18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)	10
18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)(1)	9
18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)(2)	9
18 U.S.C. § 3512(a)(2)(D)	9
18 U.S.C. § 3512(b)	10
18 U.S.C. § 3512(b)(1)	9, 10
18 U.S.C. § 3512(b)(2)	10
18 U.S.C. § 3512(c)	9
18 U.S.C. § 3512(e)	9
18 U.S.C. § 3512(f)	10
28 U.S.C. § 1651	18
28 U.S.C. § 1696	18
28 U.S.C. § 1781	1, 2, 17, 18
28 U.S.C. § 1781(a)	2, 17
28 U.S.C. § 1781(b)	2, 17
28 U.S.C. § 1781(b)(2)	13
28 U.S.C. § 1782	passim

28 U.S.C. § 1782(a).....	passim
28 U.S.C. § 2703.....	9
28 U.S.C. § 3123.....	9
Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2018, Pub. L. No. 115-141, div. V, 132 Stat. 1213.....	16
Stored Communications Act, Pub. L. No. 99-508, 100 Stat. 1860 (1986).....	16

RULES

Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(f)(2)(B).....	17
Fed. R. Civ. P. 28.....	2
Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(b).....	17
Fed. R. Crim. P. 15.....	12
Fed. R. Crim. P. 41.....	9
Rule 16.....	13

REGULATIONS

22 C.F.R. 92.66.....	18
----------------------	----

LEGISLATIVE

155 Cong. Rec. S6810 (daily ed. June 18, 2009) (statement of Sen. Whitehouse).....	9
Clarifying Lawful Overseas Use of Data Act (“CLOUD Act”) (H.R. 4943, 115th Cong. (2018).....	16
Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty with Bermuda, Senate Exec. Rep. No. 112-3 (Aug. 30, 2011).....	6
S. Exec. Doc. No. 109-14 (2006).....	6
S. Exec. Doc. No. 110-14 (2008).....	6
S. Treaty Doc. No. 111-6 (2010).....	6

TREATIES

Agreement on Mutual Legal Assistance, E.U.-U.S., June 25, 2003, T.I.A.S. No. 10-201.1.....	6
Hague Convention Relating to Civil Procedure, Mar. 1, 1954, 286 U.N.T.S. 265.....	17

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, art. 14, § 3, Dec. 19, 1966, 999 U.N.T.S. 171	12
Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Braz.-U.S., Feb. 21, 2001, T.I.A.S. No. 12889	6
Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Ger.-U.S., Oct. 14, 2003, art. 1, ¶ 2, T.I.A.S. No. 09-1018.....	5, 6, 7
Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Ir.-U.S., art. 14, ¶ 1, Jan. 18, 2001, T.I.A.S. No. 13137,	5, 6

OTHER AUTHORITIES

Alejandro A. Nava Cuenca, Debunking the Myths: International Commercial Arbitration and Section 1782(a) , 46 Yale J. Int'l L. 155 (2021)	8
Basil Gupta & Ayush Mangal, Dethroned Adani, Unstabilised Market and Distressed Investors: The Domino Effect of Adani-Hindenburg Saga , 16 NUJS L. Rev. 74 (2023)	11
Brian Richardson, The Imperial Prosecutor? , 59 Am. Crim. L. Rev. 39 (2022)	2
Bruce Zagaris, Int'l Tax Enforcement Cooperation and Int'l Human Rights , 39 Int'l Enf't L. Rep. 203 (2023)	10
Cássius Guimarães Chai et al., Global Governance and Democracy: Discussing Mutual Legal Correspondence, Human Rights, and Legal Cooperation on Criminal Justice , 14 Beijing L. Rev. 1504 (2023)	1
Compulsory Process Clause of the Sixth Amendment.....	7, 12, 13
Daniel Huff, Witness for the Defense: The Compulsory Process Clause as a Limit on Extraterritorial Criminal Jurisdiction , 15 Tex. Rev. L. & Pol. 129 (2010).....	12
David Cole, Are Foreign Nationals Entitled to the Same Constitutional Rights As Citizens? , 25 Jefferson L. Rev. 367 (2003)	7
David Farnham, Foreign Evidence and Tolling the Statute of Limitations , 29 Crim. Just. 27 (2015)	15
David Luban et al., International and Transnational Criminal Law 376 (2009).....	6
David Rubinstein, Judicial Assistance as Intended: Reconciling § 1782's Present Practice with Its Past , 123 Colum. L. Rev. 513 (2023)	17
Doha Declaration on Integrating Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice	1
Eileen P. McCarthy, A Proposed Uniform Standard for U.S. Courts in Granting Requests for International Judicial Assistance , 15 Fordham Int'l L.J. 772 (1991).....	17

Frank Tuerkheimer, Globalization of U.S. Law Enforcement: Does the Constitution Come Along? , 39 Hous. L. Rev. 307 (2002).....	12
Halefom H. Abraha, How Compatible Is the US ‘CLOUD Act’ with Cloud Computing? A Brief Analysis , 9 Int’l Data Priv. L. 207 (2019).....	16
Hon. Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, The Role of Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties in Obtaining Foreign Evidence , 40 A.B.A. Litig. J. 1 (2014).....	6, 10
Hon. Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, The Role of Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties in Obtaining Foreign Evidence , Litig. Mag. 1 (2014).....	2
Ian R. Conner, Note, Peoples Divided: The Application of United States Constitutional Protections in International Criminal Law Enforcement , 11 Wm. & Mary Bill Rts. J. 495 (2002).....	12
Jeffrey Simser, Asset Recovery and Kleptocracy , 17 J. Fin. Crime 321 (2010).....	14
Jenia Iontcheva Turner, Transnational Networks and International Criminal Justice , 105 Mich. L. Rev. 985 (2007).....	1
Jennifer Daskal, Microsoft Ireland, the CLOUD Act, and International Lawmaking 2.0 , 71 Stan. L. Rev. Online 9 (2018).....	16
Kimberly Prost, Breaking Down the Barriers: International Cooperation in Combating Transnational Crime (1998).....	5
Krista Peace, Where in the World Is My Data Today? The U.S. - U.K. Bilateral Data Access Agreement Ushers in a New Era of Cross-Border Data Sharing for Criminal Investigations , 47 N.C. J. Int’l L. 417 (2022).....	7, 10, 12
L. Song Richardson, Convicting the Innocent in Transnational Criminal Cases: A Comparative Institutional Analysis Approach to the Problem , 26 Berkeley J. Int’l L. 62, 84 (2008).....	11, 12
Letter of Request , Black’s Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019).....	2
Lita M. Grace, The United States and Canadian Border: An Attempt to Increase Bi-Lateral Cooperation for the Prevention of Transnational Crime , Colum. J. Int’l Aff., July 23, 2012.....	1
Loren M. Scolaro, Note, The Past, Present, and Future of United States-China Mutual Legal Assistance , 94 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 1688 (2019).....	18
Michael J. Bulzomi, Investigating International Terrorism Overseas: Constitutional Considerations , 71 FBI L. Enforcement Bull. 25 (July 2002).....	7
Morris H. Deutsch, Judicial Assistance: Obtaining Evidence in the United States, Under 28 U.S.C. § 1782, for Use in a Foreign or International Tribunal , 5 B.C. Int’l & Compar. L. Rev. 175 (1982).....	17

Peter Swire & Justin D. Hemmings, Mutual Legal Assistance in an Era of Globalized Communications: The Analogy to the Visa Waiver Program , 71 N.Y.U. Ann. Surv. Am. L. 687 (2016).....	18
Raquel de Mattos Pimenta & Otavio Venturini, International Cooperation and Negotiated Settlements for Transnational Bribery: A Study of the Odebrecht Case , 17 DIREITO GV L. Rev. 1 (2021).....	1
Rebecca J. Hamilton, Future-Proofing U.S. Law for War Crimes Investigations in the Digital Era , 57 Ga. L. Rev. 1505 (2023).....	8
Rebecca Wexler, Life, Liberty, and Data Privacy: The Global CLOUD, the Criminally Accused, and Executive Versus Judicial Compulsory Process Powers , 101 Tex. L. Rev. 1341 (2023).....	2, 12
Robert J. Peters et al., Not an Ocean Away, Only a Moment Away: A Prosecutor's Primer for Obtaining Remotely Stored Data , 47 Mitchell Hamline L. Rev. 1072 (2021)	15
Robert Neale Lyman, Note, Compulsory Process in a Globalized Era: Defendant Access to Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties , 47 Va. J. Int'l L. 261 (2006).....	12
Robert Timothy Reagan, Federal Judicial Center, Sealing Court Records and Proceedings: A Pocket Guide (2010)	9
T. Markus Funk & Bo Dul, Regrouping and Refocusing: 2013 FCPA Year-In-Review and Enforcement Trends for 2014 , Bloomberg BNA Sec. Reg. & L. Rep., 46 SRLR 121 (Jan. 20, 2014)	12
U.S. Const. amend. IV	7
U.S. Const. amend. V	7, 20
U.S. Dep't of State, 7 Foreign Affairs Manual § 962.1.....	2, 5
U.S. Department of State, Preparation of Letters Rogatory	17
U.S. Gov't Accountability Off., Tax Administration: IRS's Information Exchanges with Other Countries Could Be Improved through Better Performance Information , GAO-11-730 (2011).....	6
Virginia M. Kendall & T. Markus Funk, Child Exploitation and Trafficking: Examining Global Challenges and U.S. Responses (2012).....	14
Wendy Waldron & Michael I. Yoon, Obtaining Foreign Evidence in Child Sex Tourism Cases , 54 U.S. Att'ys Bull. 30 (Nov. 2006).....	23
Will Havemann, Privilege and the Belfast Project , 65 Stan. L. Rev. Online 79 (2012).....	7

Yanbai Andrea Wang, Exporting American Discovery , 87 U. Chi. L. Rev. 2089 (2020)	18
Zhaobin Pei & Yuntong Wu, Prospects for the Operation of China South Korea International Police Cooperation Mechanism against Crime , 2 Found. L. & Int'l Aff. Rev. 187 (2021)	1

About the Author

T. Markus Funk is a partner at Perkins Coie. Before entering private practice, he served as a federal prosecutor in Chicago for ten years and for two years was the USDOJ Section Chief in post-conflict Kosovo. Both the State Department and DOJ awarded Mr. Funk their highest service distinctions (the Attorney General's Award and the Superior Honor Award, respectively).

Mr. Funk was formerly a law clerk to Chief U.S. District Judge Catherine D. Perry (St. Louis) and the Hon. Morris S. Arnold (U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit). He taught criminal and international law at, among other places, the University of Oxford (where he was awarded his PhD in Law), the University of Chicago Law School, the University of Colorado-Boulder, Northwestern University School of Law, and the DOJ's National Advocacy Center.

Mr. Funk has authored numerous books, book chapters, and articles on international law and litigation, including The Kosovo Trial Skills Manual (U.S. Department of Justice 2007), Victims' Rights and Advocacy at the International Criminal Court (Oxford University Press 2010), The Haiti Trial Skills Manual (American Bar Association 2011), Child Exploitation and Trafficking: Examining the Global Challenges and U.S. Responses (co-authored with the Hon. Virginia M. Kendall; Rowman & Littlefield 2012), Rethinking Self-Defence: The 'Ancient Right's' Rationale Disentangled (Bloomsbury/Hart Publishing 2021), and From Baksheesh to Bribery: Understanding the Global Fight Against Corruption and Graft (co-authored with Andrew S. Boutros; Oxford University Press 2019). He can be reached at mfunk@perkinscoie.com.

The Federal Judicial Center

Board

The Chief Justice of the United States, Chair

Chief Bankruptcy Judge Mildred Cabán, U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Puerto Rico

Judge Kathleen Cardone, U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas

Judge R. Guy Cole, Jr., U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

Judge Sara L. Ellis, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois

Judge Ralph R. Erickson, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit

Magistrate Judge Anthony E. Porcelli, U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida

Judge Lynn Winmill, U.S. District Court for the District of Idaho

Judge Robert J. Conrad, Jr., Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts

Director

John S. Cooke

Deputy Director

Clara J. Altman

About the Federal Judicial Center

The Federal Judicial Center is the research and education agency of the federal judicial system. It was established by Congress in 1967 (28 U.S.C. §§ 620–629) on the recommendation of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

By statute, the Chief Justice of the United States chairs the Center’s Board, which also includes the director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts and seven judges elected by the Judicial Conference.

The organization of the Center reflects its primary statutory mandates. The Education Division plans and produces education and training for judges and court staff, including in-person and virtual programs, videos and podcasts, publications, curriculum packages for in-district training, and web-based resources. The Research Division examines and evaluates current and alternative federal court practices and policies. This research assists Judicial Conference committees, who request most Center research, in developing policy recommendations. The Center’s research also contributes substantially to its educational programs. The Federal Judicial History Office helps courts and others study and preserve federal judicial history. The International Office provides information to judicial and legal officials from foreign countries and informs federal judicial personnel of developments in international law and other court systems that may affect their work. Two units of the Director’s Office—the Information Technology Office and the Editorial & Information Services Office—support Center missions through technology, editorial and design assistance, and organization and dissemination of Center resources.